Questions when considering order automation

As a company evolves, keeping up with rising order volumes can be challenging. Automation can be a daunting concept, but there comes a time when your growth and success depend on it.

1

How long does it take to process a new order?

Of course, the faster you can process an order, the sooner you can get it out the door, but turnaround windows are getting shorter and shorter.

For example, many major retailers now require four-hour turnaround times on drop-ship orders.

2

How many orders do you receive per day?

What once took one person a few hours a week has become a never-ending task.

Growing businesses need to fulfill more orders. That means spending more time processing paperwork and hiring more people to ship product.

3

How long does it take to close the books at month-end?

Manual invoice processing is a slow and time-consuming process. Plus, the likelihood of errors is high. Automation speeds up the process and significantly reduces the chance of costly human errors.

4

Can you easily identify overdue payments and unresolved customer balances?

You should be able to identify outstanding payments quickly and easily. The harder it is to identify customers who are late on payments, the longer it takes to remind them, delaying payment even further.

5

Do you have accurate and up-to-date financial data for decision making?

Having updated and accurate financial information allows you to make informed decisions.

Without automation, essential data that could influence your decisions might be on someone else's desk or in their email inbox.

Here's what our customers have to say:

"We were receiving more than 600 orders per month. If we were manually entering these orders, we'd have drowned just keeping up. Automating allows us to improve our internal operations and know that we can meet our customers' expectations."

—Senior IT Administrator, True Brands

"Our daily order volume used to take up to three hours to download and manually enter into our internal systems. The entire process is now accomplished in seconds using SPS Commerce."

—Vice President of Sales, John Louis

"We have estimated that by automating our shipping notices with just one trading partner, we will save eight hours per week. This is a huge workforce improvement for a company of our size."

—Director of IT, Benchmark

"By switching to SPS, we reallocated staff, saving more than 180 hours each month, and have seen a huge uptick in our vendor scorecard performance across retailers."

—Director of IT, Hyland's
